

Arab oil states will ease prices on Arab sales

KUWAIT, June 27 (R) -- The Arab foreign and economy ministers' conference to be held in Amman July 6 will be the scene of an announcement that Arab oil producing countries will sell crude oil to other Arab states at concessionary prices, according to a Kuwaiti newspaper.

The daily Al Qabas quoting responsible sources here, said the decision, which was taken unanimously, was part of a long-term Arab strategy. It did not name the countries which would qualify for the concessionary oil sale.

Of 21 Arab states Djibouti, Jordan, Lebanon, Mauritania, Morocco, Somalia, Sudan, North Yemen and South Yemen have no oil and pay for their supplies at prices fixed by the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Jordan had recently advocated special oil prices for non-oil producing Arab states.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I: As a result of unrelenting pressure applied by U.S. Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, the statement issued in Ankara Thursday by the NATO foreign ministers was empty of any reference to the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. But Mr. Muskie was not content with his achievement in the conference hall and in the communiqué, and came out to explain to reporters that the issue of Palestinian rights is a matter now under negotiation with Middle East, and therefore it would not be suitable to take a public position in this regard because this might affect the negotiations.

Although this attitude surprised nobody who is involved in the conflict, we believe it points once again to the lack of equilibrium in U.S.-European relations, and poses questions about Europe's ability to make an effective and positive contribution to a solution of the Middle East crisis. For the nine European countries which signed the Venice declaration, and who represent more than half of NATO's membership, were unable to get the nearest reference to the legitimate rights of the Palestinians included in the Ankara communiqué.

Several Arab parties have welcomed the Venice declaration and said they considered it a positive step and an indicator of the important role the European group can play in establishing a just and comprehensive peace in the region. But the same parties may find themselves forced to reconsider the European position, as its value and ability to influence events have been called into question since Europe has failed in the Ankara statement to produce any echo of the language used in that of Venice.

AL DUSTOUR: It was not unexpected that the U.S. opposed a paragraph in the NATO countries' statement on the Middle East providing for the Palestinian right to self-determination, and that it exercised its domination of the alliance to have the paragraph omitted from the statement.

Washington realised that by recognising the Palestinian people's right to self-determination in their land, it would demolish the structure that Israel and the other Camp David parties have built at the expense of that people's cause. This would inevitably mean the collapse of all of Israel's projects in the occupied territories—the settlements, the annexation of Jerusalem and the Judaisation of Arab land and villages. Consequently it would mean the failure of the Camp David attempt to monopolise attempts to reach a settlement.

America's domination of the NATO countries meant the Palestinian people's rights were ignored in the last statement. But the Venice declaration, which stressed these rights, came despite pressure and threats from the U.S., which shows that the world's understanding of Palestinian self-determination is not dictated by the American and Israeli interpretation, and that the question will not be neglected forever.

While we understand the reasons which make the U.S. take such a contrary stand on the Palestinian right to self-determination, which is an indivisible principle, we are confident that this will not always remain the attitude of a superpower which is responsible for international security as well as for its own reputation and standing before the whole world, and which must protect its interests with the Arab nation.

Olympic shooting team set sights high

AMMAN, June 27 -- Of all the thousands of sportsmen and women who will be converging on Moscow for the Olympic Games, at least six competitors have already set something of a record. They have never competed anywhere before in their lives, not even in their own country.

Competing in the Olympics may be the ultimate achievement for most sportsmen, the culmination, perhaps, of decades of harsh training and high-level competition. But for the Jordanian trap shooting team the Olympics are just the beginning.

Nor are they going to Moscow just as a token team representing Jordan in its Olympic debut. No-one in the know about the standard of this extremely expensive, highly demanding sport has any inflated ideas about the team's chances of walking off with a medal, or even a high placing, (though their target-shooting colleagues do have such a chance). But their latest scores are highly commendable, good enough for them to finish somewhere in the middle on the Olympic scoreboards.

The Jordanian public and even the government seem for the most part to be totally unaware of the team's existence, let alone of its merits. To set matters right, Mr. Mohammad Jamhour, manager of the Royal Jordanian Shooting Club, the team's sponsor, invited the press along to the club's shooting range today for a display of the team's skill. His Highness Prince Mohammad, the club's president, also came along to observe and discuss the sport. But for some of the guests it was also their first chance to get an idea of what clay pigeon shooting is all about.

As an unexpected bonus, one of the world's former leading exponents of the sport was on hand to comment on the team's ability. Mr. Saifullah Ghaleb, Egyptian champion of the nineteen-forties and fifties, champion of Europe in 1955 and third and fifth in the world in 1947 and 1954 respectively, has for the last week been providing the team with its first professional training in two years.

"A team has been born this week," enthused his wife Majda who, having observed clay pigeon shooting at the top level for so many years, could accurately pronounce that the team has improved 50 per cent with her husband's guidance.

Prior to Mr. Ghaleb's appearance at the Royal Shooting Club last week the team was being trained by its captain, Mr. Amir Barakat, a local merchant who, although not the best shooter, as he admits himself, has had the advantage of living many years in Egypt and learning from the pros.

The number one marksman in the team is Mr. Khalid Odeh, a Pepsi Cola sales manager who averages over 90 per cent hits. Not far behind him are colleagues Mr. Mohammad Shahin (who has just passed the tawjihi and is off to study in the U.S.), Mr. Khairi 'Amr, an engineering student at Cornell University, Mr. Ziad Al Farkh, a local businessman and Mr. Nader Shalhoub, owner of the Shepherds Hotel.

Their shooting experience goes back to their childhood, when hunting with his father could be a boy's favourite pastime. As hunting was gradually discouraged (by the Royal Society for the Conservation of Nature, formed at the same time as the shooting club in 1975) and finally banned last year, they all had to take up shooting at clay pigeons instead.

Mr. Ghaleb has been invaluable in giving the inexperienced competitors moral support as well as hints on technique and, most important of all, on concentration, a vital ingredient when one is aiming with a 12 gauge shotgun at a clay disc ten centimetres in diameter hurtling away into space at a speed of up to 70 kilometres an hour.

Below the ground some 15 metres ahead of the shooters, who stand five to a row in a straight line, are fifteen machines (three for each shooting position) regulated by a computer programme so that at no time can the marksman guess in which direction the clay pigeon will be fired. The human voice shouting "pull" down a microphone is enough, through the aid of an electronic device, to trigger one of the underground machines, each of which is sighted at a different angle, elevation and speed. The marksman has two cartridges to spend on each of his five turns in a team round of 25, with the team rotating positions.

The Jordan team's average is 20 hits out of 25. While there are about six teams in the world that can score 25 out of 25, the Jordanians' average is level with many other international teams, says Mr. Jamhour, who went all the way to the 1979 world champ-

Cost of living drops by 2 per cent in 1

By a Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN, June 27 -- A bumper crop of vegetables was behind a two per cent drop in the cost of living here during May.

According to the monthly "Cost of Living Index Bulletin" published by the Department of Statistics here yesterday, a 27 per cent decrease in the price of vegetables in May accounted for the largest monthly decline in prices this year.

Overall, the cost of living has gone up by just 1.2 per cent net from the beginning of the year through the end of May.

However, those who are hopeful that the first year of this decade will usher in an era of single-digit inflation for Jordan should take note of the fact that in the first five months of 1979 there was no inflation at all -- in fact the cost of living went down by 1.2 per cent. In later months prices surged upward resulting in an 11.7 per cent inflation rate for the calendar year 1979.

Moreover, the latest bulletin indicates that between May 1979 and May 1980, the cost of living increased by 14.4 per cent. That figure is down, though, from the 17.6 per cent inflation rate registered during the 12-month period ending in April of this year.

The cost of living index weights a range of consumer expenditures, including food, clothing, housing and transportation costs, and it calculates the increase or decrease in the average cost of each item from month to month.

The year 1975 is used as a "base year", with an assigned value of 100. The cost of living bulletin indicates that prices in May were 72.5 per cent higher than in the base year.

It has become increasingly apparent in recent months that the ability to control inflation largely on keeping down the cost of food -- which accounts for 30 per cent of consumer expenditures -- and of fuel, utilities, transportation costs. This trend should be a recession in May accounted for the largest monthly decline in prices this year.

Most other consumer services have been price stability in recent months. This trend should be a recession in May accounted for the largest monthly decline in prices this year.

The outlook is bright forecasts that international prices will undergo such large fluctuations as they did last year, the winter's abrupt promise unusually good of grains, vegetables and, consequently, prices.

Food prices in May 1979 per cent decline level in April, a significant effect of the winter's abrupt promise unusually good of grains, vegetables and, consequently, prices.

The price of vegetables account for more than 27 per cent of the average total expenditures -- a sharp 27 per cent last year, the winter's abrupt promise unusually good of grains, vegetables and, consequently, prices.

Meat, poultry and increased by 1.2 per cent prices of food in other months remained the same or slightly higher. The prices of all other goods and services stable throughout May except for a slight increase in the price of a packet of tea and a packet of instant noodle in their retail price.

Japan to curb car exports to U.S.

TOKYO, June 27 (R)—The Japanese government is to take early action to make car manufacturers curb their exports to the United States, informed sources said yesterday. The ministry for international trade and industry will issue an "administrative guidance," probably next week, calling on them to exercise thorough restraint, they said.

Japan's largest vehicle maker Toyota said the car companies would have to accept the government decision. Executives of Toyota and other leading auto makers will be summoned separately to hear the decision, which the ministry had earlier issued indirectly through their manufacturers' association, the sources said.

The decision aims at countering mounting U.S. criticism of Japanese car sales on the American market, totalling 2.2 million in the year ending last March. The small, low fuel consumption models have captured some 22 per cent of the U.S. market while sales of the mainly large cars of U.S. manufacturers have slumped. Toyota countered in a statement press reports that it was in favour of moves to curb exports through a voluntary pact by companies. It said this could be considered a violation of the U.S. anti-trust laws and that any pact would have to be on a government basis.

New company to protect coffee export prices

PANAMA CITY, June 27 (AP)—Eight Latin American countries, which produce almost two-thirds of the coffee consumed by the rest of the world, have set up a $500 million international corporation to protect the export price of the bean, a source within the group who asked anonymity said. The source said the agreement was signed Wednesday, after 24 hours of negotiations between representatives of the coffee institutes or agencies of El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica, Venezuela, Mexico, Colombia, Brazil and Guatemala.

The new corporation has been named Panacafe-Productores Asociados with a capital of $500 million subscribed with capital from the coffee regulating agencies of the eight countries, also known as the Bogota Group. In some of the countries, these are private. In others, they are entirely state-owned, and mixed in others.

The source said Panacafe-Productores Asociados will replace the coffee stabilisation fund the Bogota Group set up last August at a meeting in the Colombian capital by the same name.

The fund, with a capital of $140 million bought up excess coffee from the eight countries to keep the price from falling, and later sold it on the international market when the price was right, turning a $200 million profit in its 11-month existence.

The source said Panacafe-Productores Asociados, which will substitute the institute, has a larger operating capital and will have greater scope in trading on the international market.

Philippines 1980 oil bill may reach $2.6b

MANILA, June 27 (R)—The Philippines may have to spend $2.6 billion on oil imports during 1980, $1.0 billion more than last year, a Philippine National Oil Company (PNOC) spokesman said today.

The forecast followed the latest round of price increases by the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), although so far only Iraq had advised the PNOC of a two-dollar a barrel increase effective on July 1.

"We feel that the cost could go to $2.6 billion this year, assuming our suppliers go to $32 a barrel," the spokesman said. "The only thing which could pull it down would be if Saudi Arabia staggers its increases." Saudi Arabia is the Philippines' main oil supplier. It also imports oil from Indonesia, Kuwait, China and Malaysia.

Although the Philippines aimed to keep domestic consumption steady at around 82 million barrels this year, a slowdown in production from domestic fields meant that imports this year would probably be between 79 and 80 million barrels, compared with between 74 and 75 million last year.

Gold price rises again

LONDON, June 27 (R)—The price of gold today jumped to its highest levels since March, trading at more than $630 an ounce on European bullion markets. It rose against a background of anxiety about the international political situation, dealers said, but technical factors were more immediate reasons for the increase.

Although nowhere near the feverish record heights of $875 an ounce reached at the start of the year, gold has been creeping upwards from the $500 to $520 level at which it stabilised in May.

This is partly because of declining interest rates in the United States which boosted the dollar as an investment when they were at their peak. Since they have dropped back, gold has reappeared as a good investment, dealers said.

There have also been rumours of possible shortages in the future of gold supplies, especially if South Africa, the main supplier, withholds some of its gold to control the flow onto the markets.

In Zurich today, however, Swiss bankers expressed scepticism about reports that South Africa might withhold significant amounts of gold from the market because of its more favourable balance of payments position.

Gold pool sources there said they believe South Africa could not refrain from selling for more

Consortium to review India's weak economic performance

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP)—India's economic performance during 1979 and the first part of 1980 deteriorated, with a decline in agricultural and industrial production, the World Bank said yesterday. After four years of impressive growth, Gross National Product (GNP) fell by about three per cent, it said. Agriculture suffered as a result of drought, and shortage of power and diesel oil, the bank added.

Triggered by shortages, world inflation and the drought, the general price level rose at a considerably faster rate than at any time since 1973-74. The import bill rose due to domestic scarcities and world inflation, in particular due to the rise in petroleum prices.

Growth in export earnings was modest and the trade deficit grew to become the largest in India's history. Foreign exchange reserves which had risen continuously since the mid-seventies started to decline in the early part of 1980. This was summarised in a survey prepared by the World Bank for the consortium that provides India with economic assistance.

Representatives of governments and institutions in the consortium will meet in Paris under the chairmanship of the World Bank on July 3-4.

Members of the India consortium include Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, the United Kingdom, the United States, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Meanwhile, the World Bank announced yesterday the approval of a $108 million loan to Nigeria for a highway project. The bank said the loan will assist in alleviating some critical weaknesses in the road planning, design, construction and maintenance activities of the federal highway authorities.

A serviceable road network is a basic requirement for the realisation of Nigeria's agricultural and industrial potential, it said.

On the other hand, a number of Kuwait banks and investment companies have finalised plans to set up a new $50 million bank, named the Kuwait and Asia Bank.

The bank, to be based in Bahrain, is primarily aimed at recycling part of Kuwait petrodollar investments to South-East Asia and Far East countries, the sources that did not wish to be identified said.

The venture is also aimed at the geographical diversification of Kuwait investments through tapping new areas with promising economic growth rates, the sources added.

Ali to fight Holmes in September

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP) — Retired heavyweight champion, Muhammad Ali said he had finalized a deal with promoter Don King to fight World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes in September.

Holmes and Ali originally had signed to meet in July at Rio de Janeiro, but the bout, which was to mark Ali's comeback from retirement, was postponed and no new date or site has been announced. There had been earlier reports that the bout would be held in September.

Meanwhile, Gerrie Coetzee signed a formal contract here yesterday to meet World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Mike Weaver in a world title fight Oct. 25, the South African Press Association (SAPA), reported. SAPA said the bout, scheduled to be held at Sun City, involves $3 million.

Weaver signed his contract in the United States last week and will earn a $2.2 million purse — only the third boxer in history after Muhammad Ali and Leon Spinks to get more than $2 million for a fight.

South Africa's heavyweight champ, Coetzee will earn only $150,000 but says it is not the money that interests him. "What is important is that I am going to fight a man that I know I can beat."

Yesterday's formal announcement of the fight date followed nearly a week of wrangling between hotelier Sol Kerzner and American boxing entrepreneur Bob Arum. The fight is to be televised live worldwide by the American network to an expected audience of 500 million people.

Kerzner's Southern Sun Hotel Group will sponsor the fight to be held in a $8.8 million multi-purpose complex being built at Sun City. According to Kerzner, the new indoor stadium — it has yet to be built — will seat about 14,000 on fight night.

Kane wins trans-Pacific singlehanded race

LIHUE, Hawaii, June 27 (AP) — American Michael Kane won the San Francisco-to-Kauai singlehanded yacht race yesterday in a record time of 10 days and 19 hours.

Kane, sailing the 16 metre trimaran, Crusader, arrived in the early morning hours and was greeted with news that his wife had given birth to his third son hours before he landed at Hanalei.

Race officials assumed Kane was leading, but were concerned over the lack of radio contact from the Crusader. The winner explained why. "The bloody thing didn't work," he said.

Kane's effort beat Norton Smith's singlehanded sailing record of 13 days and two hours set in the last trans-Pacific singlehanded race to Hanalei in 1978.

Cyclists hit the road in Tour de France

WIESBADEN, West Germany, June 27 (R) — Jan Raas of the Netherlands won the opening section of the first stage of the Tour de France today, the 132.5 kilometre run from Frankfurt to Wiesbaden. Frenchman Bernard Hinault retained the overall race leader's yellow jersey.

Later today the riders faced a 45.8 kilometre team time trial from Wiesbaden to Frankfurt.

Second in the morning's road race section was William Tackaert of Belgium and third Ireland's Sean Kelly.

Wimbledon: Borg breezes, McEnroe scrambles

LONDON, June 27 (R) — Title-holder Bjorn Borg of Sweden won comfortably, American second seed John McEnroe won with difficulty and the first women's seed finally came to grief as the Wimbledon tennis championships basked in a rare spell of fine weather here today.

Borg, favourite to capture the men's title for the fifth year in a row, chalked up his 30th successive Wimbledon singles win when he beat Shlomo Glickstein, the first Israeli to reach the second round here, 6-3, 6-1, 7-5.

The Swede's victory was in complete contrast to McEnroe's scrambled second round win over unrated Australian Terry Roddick. McEnroe, the U.S. Open champion, won 4-6, 7-5, 6-7, 7-6, 6-3, producing one of those listless performances that from time to time afflict his game.

The ranks of the women's seeds, after remaining intact for the first four days, were suddenly reduced by four when Romania's Virginia Ruzici, Sue Barker of Britain, Czechoslovak Regina Marsikova and Sylvia Hanika of West Germany, seeded 12th, 13th, 15th, and 16th respectively, all went out in the second round.

Three Americans — Joanne Russell, Betty-Ann Dent and Pam Schriver — were involved in the upsets. Russell beat Ruzici 6-2, 3-6, 6-4; Dent beat Barker 3-6, 7-5, 6-2; and Schriver beat Hanika 6-3, 1-6, 9-7. Australian Sue Saliba scored the fourth shock, winning 6-2, 3-6, 6-1 against Marsikova.

Borg won without having to exert himself although Glickstein deserved credit for a spirited showing in the third set which kept the champion on court a little longer than he must have expected. After the match Borg said he was happy with the way he played which, for the master of understatement, was a warning to his rivals that all is well with his title defence.

As South, vulnerable, hold: ♠A ♠K107 ♠AQ6 ♠AQ42. Partner opens the bidding in one spade. What do you respond?

When you have a bid MANDATORY shows both the strength and the shape of your hand. NESE RESTRICTED, use it. Jump to three trump. That describes a AQ42 of 16-18 points in high AMMASHARDS and, specifically, a 3-3 pattern.

Neither vulnerable, as you hold: ♠AJ752 ♠109 ♠AKQJ7. Partner opens the bidding in one spade. What do you respond?

Don't be fooled into taking the "cheap" heart bid. You must complete description of your hand. four clubs. By inference, promises at least a five heart suit — with five and only four hearts, I would have opened one heart, not one heart.

Both vulnerable, as you hold: ♠76 ♠Q962 ♠Q8 ♠KJ93. Partner opens the bidding in one spade. What do you respond?

With a better than expected hand opposite a partner who has made a meritable takeout double in an immediate seat, you would not permit the opponents to buy the hand at a two-level. Bid three hearts and allow partner to take the preference to one of his suits.

As South, vulnerable, hold:

♠8752 ♠63 ♠AKJ6 ♠AK10. The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass ? What do you bid now?

A. — Partner cannot have much outside the heart suit, so he must have, at least, six good hearts to overcall vulnerable at the two-level. Since partner has promised six tricks with hearts as trumps and you are delivering four more, don't worry about your trump support — just bid four hearts. We would make this bid even if we had only a singleton heart.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠KJ63 ♠A982 ♠AKQ5 ♠6. Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A. — Certainly you intend to play this hand in either a small or grand slam, and you should advise partner of the prospects immediately. Make a jump shift to three diamonds. Take a large demerit if you jumped to three spades — the hand is far too strong for that action. And a response of only two diamonds will result in your torturing partner for the rest of the auction.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠KJ98 ♠Q9 ♠732 ♠Q743. The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass ? What action do you take?

A. — This is close; you have a reasonable responding hand, with good cards in partner's suits, but we don't think you should raise to three clubs and look for an eleven-trick contract. Our choice would be to take a false preference to two hearts. On this auction, partner almost surely has five hearts, so if he can't bid again, this should be a playable contract.

Thais deny starting conflict with Viets

BANGKOK, June 27 (R) — Thailand today denied Vietnamese charges that Thai forces started this week's hostilities on the Thai-Kampuchean border, and said it had been promised increased military aid from the United States.

Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, in an interview with the Bangkok Post newspaper published today, said the Thai army had crossed into Kampuchea in support of anti-Phnom Penh guerrillas smuggled in under a voluntary repatriation programme.

He said the Thai Army had covered the infiltration with air-strikes, artillery and armour and had pushed six kilometres into Kampuchea on a front 20 to 30 kilometres wide.

The Thai spokesman, Major General Korboon Phattana-thabutr, told reporters: "The Thai military completely rejects as lies charges by Vietnam that Thai forces crossed into Kampuchean territory together with the refugees."

He said the repatriation operation, which started on June 16 and enraged Hanoi and the government it backs in Phnom Penh, was run jointly with the United Nations and it would be impossible for a Thai incursion into Kampuchea to go unnoticed.

Most of the nearly 9,000 refugees who returned from Thai camps went to a stronghold of guerrillas loyal to the ousted Khmer Rouge government that lies just south of the Thai frontier town of Aranyaprathet.

The stronghold, known as Phnom Malai, appears to be the next target of Vietnamese-led troops who thrust into Thailand Monday and Tuesday.

Military sources said units were moving on Phnom Malai in what appeared to be preparations to launch an attack.

The numbers of volunteers from a Khmer Rouge-dominated refugee camp going back to Phnom Malai dropped dramatically yesterday, to 124 from well over 1,000 in previous days.

U.N. officials said it was not clear whether Khmer Rouge cadres had called a halt to the repatriations, which continued unabated as the fighting raged farther north, or whether all the people who wanted to go had left.

Vietnamese-led troops were also moving on two other Khmer Rouge bases, military sources said.

The most serious movements appeared to be against a Khmer Rouge base area in northern Kampuchea, just south of the northeastern Thai border, where it appeared the Vietnamese-led troops were trying to get between the Khmer Rouge and the Thai border. Several clashes had been reported, but no details were available, the sources said.

In Kuala Lumpur, Thailand's foreign minister, Air Chief Marshal Siddhi Savetsila, told reporters that U.S. Secretary of State Edmund Muskie had promised Thailand increased military aid.

"Very soon we can expect to see many American arms-supply planes coming into Bangkok," the Thai foreign minister said.

Mr. Muskie is in Malaysia to confer with the United States' Southeast Asian allies in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), who have ended a two-day meeting in Kuala Lumpur.

The foreign ministers of the five ASEAN nations are now conferring separately with ministers of the United States, Australia, New Zealand, Japan and Canada.

The outbreak of fighting along the Thai-Kampuchean border added an air of crisis to what was to have been a symbolic show of support for ASEAN by Mr. Mus-

Red Cross aides, newsmen believed held by Vietnamese

BANGKOK, June 27 (R) — A Red Cross official today appealed to visiting Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach for the safety of two Red Cross workers believed held by Vietnamese-led troops on the Thai-Kampuchean border, a spokesman said.

The two representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), a Frenchman and a Briton, went missing yesterday along with two American newsmen in a border food distribution centre abandoned by some 50,000 Kampuchean after fighting early this week.

Relief agency sources said the four men were seen to approach Vietnamese troops in the centre, which straddles the frontier near the Thai border village of Nong Chan 280 kilometres east of here.

The letter was handed over at the Vietnamese embassy where Mr. Thach was staying for a stopover on his way home from an official visit to Indonesia. He later left for Hanoi.

The ICRC men were named as Frenchman Pierre Perrin, the medical coordinator on the frontier, and Robert Ashe, 27, who earlier this month was made a Member of the Order of the British Empire in the Queen's Birthday Honours List for his work among refugees.

Mr. Ashe ran the distribution centre which started late last year. The food it poured down a "human land bridge" of oxcarts, bicycles and people was credited with saving thousands from starvation in hungry Kampuchea.

The American Newsmen were named as Richard Franken and George Lienemann of the Bangkok-based Lensman photography agency.

The ICRC spokesman said that Red Cross officials in Hanoi and Phnom Penh would also make representations to the governments there in a bid to establish the whereabouts of the missing men.

Dutch cabinet save -- by 2-vote margin

THE HAGUE, June 27 (R) — The future of the Dutch government doubt today after it narrowly survived a parliamentary censure motion.

Prime Minister Andreas van Agt's centre-right cabinet scraped through on a 74-72 vote at dawn, after a marathon debate on its refusal to impose a unilateral oil boycott against South Africa.

The opposition leader and former Prime Minister, Mr. Joop den Uyl, who submitted the censure motion, said: "this long night has shown clearly that the cabinet's future is hanging by a thread."

Earlier in the debate, 13 deputies from the left wing of Mr. van Agt's Christian Democratic Party (CDA), helped to defeat the government by voting for an oil embargo because of South Africa's apartheid policy.

The government has said it favours an embargo, but that unilateral action would have insufficient impact without the support of the Netherlands' partners in the European Economic Community (EEC).

Parliament adjourned today for the summer recess, but when ministers return from holiday they will face the difficult task of piloting an austerity budget through the chamber in September.

The coalition government, which took power with an overall majority of two seats 30 months ago, has been under fire from Parliament over a series of issues.

Elections are not due until next May, but political sources said they expected pressure on the cabinet to build up during debates preceding the 1981 budget, which is likely to propose income cuts for most Dutch workers.

The leftist dissidents almost toppled the government last December before agreeing to support its wait-and-see policy on the provision of Dutch bases for NATO's new nuclear missiles.

The government will be weakened further in October when Defence Minister Willem Scholten resigns to become vice president of the Council of State, the country's highest legal appeals body.

The issue of a unilateral oil embargo is largely symbolic, as South Africa imports only a tiny fraction of its oil from the Netherlands.

But during the debate, Mr. van Agt promised fresh initiatives to bring about an international embargo.

He said that ministers would begin talks soon aimed at enlisting the support of Belgium, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Sweden and perhaps Finland.

In Copenhagen, a normally reliable foreign ministry source told Reuters today that he expected Denmark would fully increase aid to the states to make them economically self-sufficient.

In Oslo, a government spokesman said Norway believed that an embargo could be imposed only on the basis of a United Nations Security Council resolution.

Mr. van Agt told here that his government would signal its abhorrence of apartheid by making it a condition for any South African visit to the Netherlands to have increasing aid to the states to make them economically self-sufficient.

Africa, and by strengthening cultural ties.

2 slain in Guatemala C U.N. aides still captiv

GUATEMALA CITY, June 27 (AP) — Two Guatemalan labour leaders were kidnapped by unidentified gunmen Thursday night, tortured and shot, according to a police spokesman.

The spokesman identified the two victims as Jose Emilio Escobar Barrios, 34, and Maria Adelaida Gonzalez, 39, both leaders of the Guatemala Social Security Institute Workers' Union. He said the two were dragged from their homes by unidentified, heavily armed men.

Their bodies, showing signs of torture and with multiple bullet wounds, were found abandoned in an empty vehicle in the northern section of the Guatemalan capital, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, two U.N. seized at gunpoint here are still captive but have been harmed, according to reaching U.N. headquarters New York.

Basque bombs stir rightist backlash

MADRID, June 27 (R) — Basque separatist beach bombers today struck at Spain's key Mediterranean tourist trade for the fifth time this week amid signs of a growing right-wing backlash in the Basque country itself.

Nobody was injured in the latest explosion set off just before dawn by the ETA (Basque Homeland and Liberty) guerrilla organisation in the garden of a state-owned hotel at Javea — scene of three earlier blasts on Wednesday.

So far, the impact of the new ETA bombing campaign has been largely psychological, with nobody hurt and only limited material damage.

The government, which has refused to give in to ETA's demands for the release of 19 Basque prisoners and the sacking of a director of a prison where many of them were held, fears the campaign will frighten foreign tourists away just as the peak holiday period is starting.

Government officials said there were no signs yet of massive cancellations of hotel bookings or any exodus of foreigners from the beach resorts. But there was concern that the campaign could inflict longer-term damage to the tourist trade, a key foreign currency earner for Spain.

ETA's political-military wing set off 14 bombs in coastal resorts at the same time last summer, and officials admit that this contributed to the drop in tourist entries in 1979.

As the authorities waited nervously for new ETA warnings, an extreme right-wing organisation claimed responsibility for exploding a bomb yesterday at the tourist office in Biarritz, a seaside resort in the French Basque country.

The Spanish Basque Battalion, already blamed for five murders in the Spanish Basque country this year in revenge for ETA killings, had warned it would take reprisals if the separatists went ahead with their bombing campaign.

Reliable diplomatic sources said Liberia's military leaders, mostly enlisted men, overruled Sgt. Doe's earlier commitment and insisted that Mr. Tolbert should remain in jail to face treason and corruption charges.

The sources said Mr. Houphouet-Boigny's decision to come to Monrovia after all for the one-day visit suggested that he may have received a new assurance from Sgt. Doe that Mr. Tolbert would be released Friday.

Official sources in the Ivorian capital Abidjan, said Sgt. Doe had also promised to free several other Tolbert relatives held under house arrest since the coup, and to retract Liberia's demand for the withdrawal of French Ambassador Louis Dollot. Liberian officials declined all comment.

Soviet bomber down near Japanese coast

TOKYO, June 27 (R) — A Soviet reconnaissance-bomber aircraft crashed into the Sea of Japan and the bodies of two airmen were recovered by a passing Japanese naval ship, the defence agency here said.

The aircraft, identified as a TU-16, codenamed "Badger" by NATO, crashed outside Japanese airspace about 65 miles north of Sado Island and off the Japanese mainland.

The agency said the Badger, a twin-jet medium-range aircraft with cantilever wings, was one of two flying south from the Soviet far eastern region and believed to be on a mission to test Japanese defence systems.

Four Japanese Air Force Phantom jets were scrambled after the two aircraft were sighted, but the agency said the jets had not taken any hostile action.

Immediately after the crash, the other TU-16 turned north and headed for Soviet territory while three Japanese coast guard vessels backed by at least six aircraft and three helicopters rushed to the scene.

The agency said the Badger plunged into the sea while circling over a Japanese naval transport and landing ship, the Nemuro, which picked up the two bodies. The defence agency said Badgers normally had a crew of between five and nine people, but it was unable to identify immediately the type of the Badger which crashed.

It said there were at least seven types of TU-16s, some packed with electronic spying equipment and others carrying AS-6 air-to-surface missiles, which could be equipped with either nuclear or conventional warheads, as well as other arms.

Several Badgers have been sighted off Japan, but outside its 12-mile airspace, in recent months.

However, since last year's border conflict between Vietnam and China many TU-95 Soviet "Bear" spyplanes have been sighted off the archipelago, apparently heading for bases near Hanoi, the defence agency said.

Two years ago, Japan started a programme to improve its early warning radar system after a defecting Soviet pilot managed to evade defences in a previously top-secret Soviet jet and land on Japanese soil.

U.S. tax break sought for overseas workers

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP) — The U.S. administration said Thursday that reducing or eliminating taxes on Americans who work in foreign countries would be inequitable and could cost the Treasury nearly half a billion dollars a year.

"It is inappropriate that all Americans who share in the benefits of American citizenship contribute taxes to the nation, said Assistant Treasury Secretary Donald C. Lubick. He said proposals to reduce the tax liability of Americans overseas could cost the government $425 million to $500 million a year.

He also disputed testimony before a U.S. Senate finance subcommittee that American exports and overseas investments were suffering because of high taxes on Americans who work abroad.

Rhode Island Republican Senator John H. Chafee conducted the hearing on his proposal to exempt from taxes the first $50,000 of annual income earned by a U.S. citizen working abroad. He said that while U.S. exports may be increasing, the American share of foreign markets is dwindling.

A 1978 law intended to ease the effects of excess cost for Americans working abroad provides a complex set of deductions and, for some citizens, an exclusion from taxes of the first $20,000 of income.

Senator Chafee and other supporters of the increased tax exemption said there is ample evidence that U.S. exports are declining because fewer Americans can afford to work in foreign countries. They contend the workers who replace the U.S. citizens prefer equipment from their own countries, taking business away from U.S. firms.

But Senator Chafee said, the Carter administration is insisting on "evidence beyond a reasonable doubt" that declining U.S. trade is related to high taxes paid by Americans working abroad.

The largest average increase in taxes on Americans working overseas is in Middle Eastern and African countries that are members of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Losing our foot in the door in these countries will have a profound effect on future exports," he said.

Bonn-Moscow summit: Who'll hold the pen

By John Morrison

MOSCOW, June 27 — Soviet and West German officials are still arguing about who should sign a long-term economic cooperation programme during Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's two-day visit here next week.

The Soviet side wants the accord to be signed by the chancellor and President Leonid Brezhnev, but the West Germans want the signing to take place at a lower level, between foreign ministers or ambassadors.

In practical terms, the difference is nil. But the intense backstage wrangle symbolises the differences of approach to what is seen here as a meeting of unusual importance to both sides. For the Kremlin, which places great symbolic significance on summit talks, much of the point of the visit will have been achieved the moment Chancellor Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher step off their plane at Moscow's Vnukovo airport.

By agreeing to come to Moscow, they are — in the view of the Soviet Union — giving a slap in the face to President Carter and proving that Moscow's links with Bonn are unaffected by events in faraway Afghanistan.

The West German side is desperately anxious to avoid giving any such impression — hence the reluctance to stage a pompous signing ceremony in the Kremlin involving Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Brezhnev.

The West German chancellor is restricting his visit to less than two full days, with no gala evenings at the Bolshoi Theatre or provincial sightseeing trips to interrupt the talking on Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Schmidt's last visit to Moscow was in October 1974, though he made a brief airport stopover here a year ago on his way to an economic summit in Tokyo.

His major stated aims are to tell Mr. Brezhnev and Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan, and to leave them with no doubts about West Germany's firm commitment to the NATO alliance.

Despite the announcement of a pullback of some Soviet military units from Afghanistan, western diplomats in Moscow feel it is highly unlikely the Kremlin will shift its position in the face of what looks like being a stern lecture from Mr. Schmidt.

The view here is that the chancellor is unlikely to succeed in pushing the Kremlin into making real concessions where non-aligned India has failed.

The other priority topic for the talks is European arms control, and in particular, prospects for curbing deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles.

Soviet press commentaries have indicated that Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Genscher are going to come under heavy pressure to undo West Germany's commitment to NATO's decision last December to station U.S. Cruise and Pershing missiles in Western Europe.

Doubts about the firmness of West Germany's commitment to the decision have been fostered in Moscow not by anything Chancellor Schmidt has said or done, but by signs of mistrust towards Mr. Schmidt from Washington.

The Soviet press gave extensive coverage to President Carter's letter to the chancellor warning him not to stray from the NATO joint decision during his Moscow talks.

To judge by the alternately hostile and friendly tone adopted in Soviet press reporting on West Germany, Moscow feels Bonn will respond best to a mixture of the carrot and the stick.

Some commentaries have accused West Germany in bullying tones of militarism and expansionism, while others have
